

- Calendars & More ▶
- Baby Names ▶
- Get Answers ▶
- News & Blogs ▶
- Photos & Videos ▶
- Favorites ▶
- Deals, Deals, Deals! ▶

Blogs Back to Community

MOMformation™
 Everything you need to know about moms, motherhood, and the state of parenting today

- MOMformation
- FAMEbaby

Giveaway: Five Sea Cuisine date-night packages

Posted by Kristina Sauerwein in Contests, Dads, Sex and Relationships | May 11th, 2009 | Trackback

If you're like me, you don't get out much. Well, OK, you probably do with your kiddos: Parks, playdates, school activities, birthday parties. But you and your husband-boyfriend-partner? Probably not so much. Or at least not as much as you'd like. Finding a sitter can be tough. And let's face it: For most of us, money is tight, and dropping it at a nice, kid-unfriendly restaurant is not within our budgets.

Sometimes, you and your loved one just have to do an at-home Date Night: Put the kids to bed (early, if you can). Share an adult-type of dinner together, preferably at a table set elegantly with your wedding wares and candlelight. Play your music (make sure to expunge all the kiddie songs out of your CD player or bypass them on your iPod). Don't forget to break out the wine—or whatever your favorite adult beverage is. Oh, and the most important rule: Don't talk about the kids, or at least not about the nitty-gritty trials of parenting (absolutely no diaper talk).

The kind folks at High Liner Foods Cuisine recognize that today's busy parents need their own adult time-out, so to speak. That is why the company is offering five BabyCenter readers an at-home Date Night Prize Package, featuring a sample of its restaurant quality Sea Cuisine seafood entrees, which include products such as Tortilla-Crusted Tilapia, Potato-Crusted Cod, Tuscan Parmesan-Crusted Shrimp and Lemon Pepper Scallops. Besides the main entree, the package also features everything you need for an at-home date night: Candles, Chocolate, a $10 iTunes gift card as well as lists recommending wines, easy sidedishes and a date-night music playlist.

But before I tell you how to enter, let's go back to the Sea Cuisine entrees: The company sent us samples of Tuscan Parmesan-Crusted Shrimp, Potato-Crusted Cod and Tortilla-Crusted Tilapia. Each package is easy to prepare in the oven and comes in generous portions. The crusted outside is crispy and adds the zing to the meal; this is particularly the case with the spicy tilapia. While my husband and I enjoyed an at-home date night, we saved parts of the three entrees for his parents (my in-laws) to taste since they are true seafood connoisseurs. My father-in-law raved about the potato-crusted cod, but both of them said all three entrees tasted like those found in a good restaurant.

Search MOMformation

Recent Posts

- It's not you that's smart, it's the egg you came from
- The Dadler: The war against stupid
- Double the naming fun
- Making your way in the world today takes everything you've got...
- Take it from me, a Bumbo seat may be your baby's bowels best friend!
- Craftastic! Butterfly beauty
- The Wilde Side: It's not you, it's... wait, it IS you

Posts RSS Feed

Most Popular

- Womb With a View: Dumb things people say to pregnant women
- Can sex through blue jeans get you pregnant?
- Do you love or hate Jon & Kate?
- Wanting a boy, getting a girl
- You're showing your age when ...
- I want a baby. NOW!
- Friday Fun: Thanks for ruining my name
- Babes' Blog, Week 87: People are kindly
- The mom who doesn't believe in birthday parties
- Some good news about morning sickness

Which is not surprising considering that Sea Cuisine is working with former restaurateur, Chef Owen Tilley, who helps develop the meals while also offering consumers cooking advice on everything from recipes for "side dish shortcuts" to pointers on using your appliances and knives to chef secrets (for instance, how to get rid of the onion smell on your hands after chopping). You can click here for Chef Owen's tips and tricks and here to win private cooking lessons from him, as well as other prizes.

Sea Cuisine can be found at most grocery and warehouse stores.

To enter:

- 1) Leave a comment with your email telling why you want a date night with your husband-boyfriend-partner by midnight CST, Saturday May 16, 2009.
- 2) For an extra entry, Twitter about it, linking back to this post. Either let me know about it in the comments below or via Twitter (I'm @sourwine).
- 3) The five separate winners will be chosen randomly by a number generator and notified early next week. The sponsor will ship the prizes.
- 4) Contest is open to U.S. residents only.
- 5) Contest is not affiliated directly with BabyCenter, and you do not have to be a member of the BabyCenter Community to win.

Good luck! And if you want to read another review of Sea Cuisine, check out my bloggy friend Amy's post over at MomAdvice. Also, thanks to Andrea—yes, this Andrea—for hooking me up with Sea Cuisine (and if you want the dirt on hooking up, check out her Good Housekeeping sex blog).

Photo of Sea Cuisine's Italian Tilipia.

Categories

Activism (144)
ADHD (58)
Adoption (23)
Allergies (35)
Autism (121)
Babe's Blog (88)
Babies (589)
Baby Naming (41)
BabyCenter Community (330)
Balancing Acts (40)
Behavior (677)
Blogs and blogging (168)
Books (288)
Breastfeeding (120)